SCHOOL TEACHER FILES SUIT AGAINST 'MISOGYNISTIC' PRINCIPAL

A Woodhaven elementary school teacher hopes to slap her boss with a $3 million lawsuit for causing her take a medical leave of absence for his "misogynistic tone." For 11 years, Christine Reaves has educated students at P.S. 60Q where Frank DeSario is the principal. Reaves said that, for unknown reasons, she began receiving "angry, abusive, intimidating" behavior from DeSario on a regular basis during the 2016 school year. Read the story on page 13.

PHONY COPS ATTEMPT A KIDNAPPING AT AN LIC CAR DEALERSHIP

Two men are wanted for posing as cops and trying to kidnap a motorist who was waiting for his car to be serviced in Long Island City, police said. A 28-year-old man was inside a Hyundai dealership on 44th Street near Northern Boulevard waiting for his car when two men approached him. Read more about the kidnapping on page 8.

QUEENS LIBRARY ACCUSED OF VIOLATING ARTIST'S FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHTS

A free speech advocacy organization is urging the Queens Library to re-open a canceled art exhibition after the library said it was uncomfortable displaying photos of people who were photographed without consent. The National Coalition Against Censorship released a letter accusing the Queens Library of violating artist Drew Kerr's First Amendment rights by canceling his exhibition "Faces of the 7 Train." STAY 'POSITIVE': QUEENS IS FIRST TO RECEIVE LIRR SAFETY ADVANCEMENT

The Long Island Rail Road has begun rolling out a new "positive" safety feature on the Port Washington Branch — which means a safer trip for commuters travelling between Queens and Long Island. Positive Train Control (PTC) was rolled out on the 16-mile stretch of tracks between Woodside and Port Washington on Dec. 17, becoming the first segment of the LIRR to receive enhanced train safety by using a network of computers that can communicate rail conditions in real time. Read more about the new safety feature on page 8.

Newsstands line the daily routes taken by the average New Yorker, always there in case you need to grab a quick candy bar or a magazine to read on your commute home.

The city's 346 newsstands stretch from Jamaica to Times Square to Brighton Beach and back again, all curiously uniform, down to the JCDecaux logo emblazoned on their sides. But the sleek design embodies a decades-long effort to modernize New York City and tends to obscure the people left behind.

To understand the current state of affairs, start by asking the newsstand owners themselves.

Few New Yorkers have been in the newsstand game as long as Elizabeth Willis, who has operated her newsstand at the corner of Manhattan's 50th Street and Seventh Avenue for more than 50 years, hawking candy bars and

Queens Leaders Look Ahead to 2019

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

The year ahead is a big one for Queens.

In 2019, all six of the borough's state senators will wield significant power in the Democratic-controlled State Senate. Amazon will finalize plans for a massive corporate campus in Long Island City, the Mets will tool up for a run at a World Series title and, for the first time since 1991, there will be a race for Queens District Attorney.

As Queens prepares for 2019, several local leaders, including current Queens DA Richard A. Brown and all three DA candidates, looked ahead to the new year and shared their goals and wishes with the Eagle.

Queens District Attorney Richard A. Brown
 “As we embark on a new year, I am hopeful that the downward trend in serious and violent crimes continues to drop. I want our neighbors, family and friends to feel secure and at peace in our borough — whether they are taking leisurely walks in our many parks, shopping at local businesses or simply visiting loved ones. I wish each and every resident of Queens County a happy, healthy, prosperous and safe 2019.”

“I am hopeful that 2019 will be another year of growth and improvement for Queens. We must continue to work together to create a better Queens for all of us — strengthening our schools, keeping our borough affordable, bringing criminal justice reform, protecting our immigrants, and fixing our transit crisis. I am proud to raise my kids here, and I am committed to making Queens stronger in the New Year.”

Councilmember Rory Lancman, candidate for Queens DA

“My wish for the new year is that Queens will turn the page on our broken, discriminatory, and outdated criminal justice system, and push for reforms that ensure fairness for all. Queens can end mass incarceration, over-policing and the ‘New Jim Crow,’ all while focusing more resources on protecting women, immigrants, and working people. We just need the leadership to get it done.”

Retired Judge Gregory Lasak, candidate for Queens DA

“As we close the book on 2018 and forge ahead to the New Year, I’m looking forward to seeing our borough continue to grow and prosper. I’m looking forward to seeing a growing economy and safer streets. And I’m looking forward to hitting the campaign trail and meeting as many Queens residents as possible as we fight for a more equal and fair criminal justice system and to make Queens the safest borough in the City. Finally, I’m thankful to all our law enforcement professionals who work their hardest to keep us safe every single day.”

In addition to the DA candidates, a few other local leaders shared their goals for 2019:

Councilmember Adrienne Adams, who represents Jamaica, Rochdale Village, Richmond Hill, and South Ozone Park

“As we forge into the year 2019, my goal is to continue to concentrate on the advancement of Queens and the City of New York as a whole. I plan to sustain my focus on the city’s infrastructure; foster and encourage economic vitality and equity; promote a high-quality of life through quality programs, services and appropriate investment; also preserve past improvements and promote future community safety gains.”

Assemblymember Aravella Simotas, who represents parts of Astoria and Long Island City and will introduce a slate of bills to combat sexual harassment

“In 2019, I will focus on strengthening worker protections against sexual harassment, and eliminating the loopholes that have shielded harassers in the past. I will continue my work to strengthen our laws that protect sexual assault survivors and to update New York State’s rape laws. I will also work to ensure that all students (including twice exceptional students) have the opportunities they deserve to pursue a quality public school education and i will work to ensure that New Yorkers can access the most effective fertility treatments to establish the families they deserve.”

Deep Underground, New NYC Train Hub Slowly Takes Shape

By Verena Dobnik
The Associated Press

Deep in the bedrock 15 stories below the famous Grand Central Terminal, a cavernous construction site is slowly and expensively taking shape as a commuter rail hub that will accommodate more than 150,000 passengers a day.

East Side Access has been dogged by massive cost overruns and delays since construction began nearly a dozen years ago. But Gov. Andrew Cuomo has brought in a manager who is focused on bringing the $11 billion project to completion by a new deadline in four years.

“We can all see the proverbial light at the end of the tunnel,” said Janno Lieber, who came to the state-run Metropolitan Transit Authority a year ago, drawing upon his private-sector experience planning the rebuilding of skyscrapers around the World Trade Center.

Massive boring machines that excavated the space have been replaced by workers clanging, sawing and hammering against concrete and steel to create a concourse and two levels of platforms, with 16 tracks in all.

The aim is to create a new, direct route for riders of the Long Island Rail Road to and from Manhattan’s East Side, alleviating traffic that currently flows through the chaotically congested Penn Station, on the island’s West Side.

On a recent morning, MTA officials led a walking and stair-climbing tour to showcase progress on the unfinished, cavern-like terminal with ceilings as high as six stories. Dozens of high-speed escalators are being built to lead down to a 350,000-square-foot LIRR concourse with marble already laid on its walls and space reserved for retail shops and dining areas.

Below the concourse are two levels, each with eight tracks and two platforms. It will be the hub for 8 miles of new tunnels blasted and drilled out from 400 million-year-old bedrock, winding their way under Park Avenue and the East River and on to Queens and Long Island.

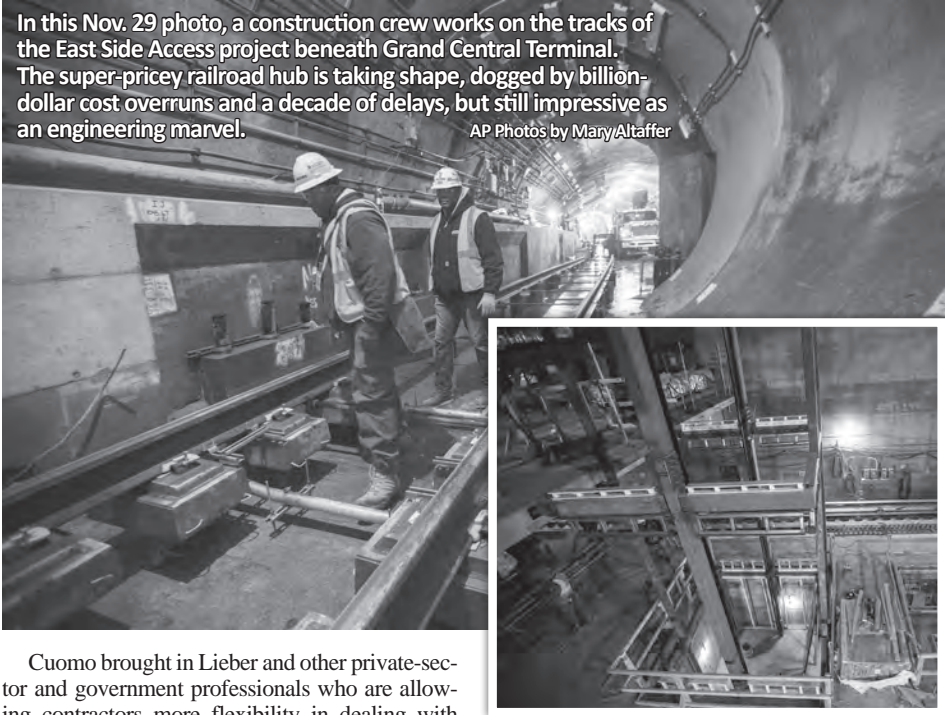

It is all focused on alleviating some of the pain for about 150,000 LIRR commuters who must somehow get to and from Grand Central every day. Currently, they have to joust, push and elbow their way to platforms at crowded Penn Station, which also accommodates Amtrak and New Jersey Transit trains, adding up to 40 minutes to their daily commutes.

For years, critics have pounced on unforeseen construction they say has been mired in politics, bureaucracy and disorganization.

MTA officials have blamed such factors as the difficulty of carving through the bedrock, the need to work around an active transportation system and the challenge of carting away 75,000 truckloads of rock, mud and other refuse. Much of it was used as fill in parks and other projects.

But there are other reasons for work moving at a snail’s pace, says Kathryn Wylde, chief executive officer and president of the Partnership for New York City, a business community group.

The MTA has 75,000 employees, including managers, she said, and the result is a massive bureaucracy with multiple agencies that all want to be involved in decisions, no matter how small. In an effort to speed things up, the governor has become the de facto “project manager” of East Side Access, Wylde said.

In this Nov. 29 photo, a construction crew works on the tracks of the East Side Access project beneath Grand Central Terminal. The super-pricey railroad hub is taking shape, dogged by billion-dollar cost overruns and a decade of delays, but still impressive as an engineering marvel.
AP Photos by Mary Altaffer

Cuomo brought in Lieber and other private-sector and government professionals who are allowing contractors more flexibility in dealing with details or unexpected circumstances, Wylde said.

“The challenge is, can they move the bureaucracy to get things done?” she asked.

Lieber says he is focused on hitting the Dec. 31, 2022 deadline.

“We now, at the MTA, are determined,” he said. “We’re changing the culture of construction management and development at the MTA.”

The Birth of Brooklyn

By John B. Manbeck
Special to the BQ Eagle

With the population growth of Brooklyn, many newcomers sense that the borough has been with us forever. Not quite. While it was created and named by the Dutch and occupied by the British, its popularity grew under American auspices and it bloomed into a city in 1834. Not the city we know today — but it did have a City Hall although the city fathers couldn't use it until 1850.

A Brooklyn the size of Kings County didn't materialize until 1896, when the town of Flatlands, the last independent town, was incorporated into the city. And then it disappeared two years later, swallowed up by Greater New York City: demoted from a city to a borough, 121 years ago. This ignominy deserves to be mourned annually. The Brooklyn Daily Eagle recorded the tragic event.

Diplomatic politicians remembered the day as a "consolidation," the day that the cities of Brooklyn, New York and Long Island City joined Staten Island, sections of Westchester and Nassau counties to create Queens and The Bronx. Here's how the Brooklyn Eagle covered the transfer of power on Dec. 31, 1897, and in the next New Year.

In a lead article headlined "[Brooklyn] City Hall Ready for Tonight's Guests," the anonymous reporter wrote a subhead, "The Reception Entirely Informal and Everyone Invited" referring to the service held at Brooklyn Mayor Frederick Wurster's offices on the last day of 1897.

In spite of the heavy rain, a large "assemblage" showed up. No entertainment was planned, but plants and orchids, supplied by the Parks Department, filled every corner of the third-floor court room. Mayor Wurster presided over the ceremonies, for the new borough president would not take office until midnight.

Sideline articles cited Brooklyn's problem debt of over $85 million. While the city of Brooklyn owed more than $66 million, the town of Gravesend (under Supervisor John Y. McKane) owed more than $1 million, the largest debt of the former Brooklyn towns.

Another column anticipated the plans of the mayor-elect of New York City, Robert Van Wyck. The opening week of his administration would be largely ceremonial and custodial since the Municipal Assembly, today's City Council, would not be in session that week.

By Jan. 2 (no publication on Jan. 1), the Eagle headlined "Farewell to City, Hail to Borough" in 48-point type in its continued report of final day of the city of Brooklyn. "Calmly and with dignity, Brooklyn passed from the state as an independent city into Greater New York." Among the invited guests at the ceremony, the Society of Old Brooklynites — still extant — appeared as guests of honor.

Six of Brooklyn's former mayors attended, including Seth Low, who would later be elected mayor of Greater New York. Though the visitors behaved well, they "could hardly have been said to be merry" but they were "patriotic and ready to appreciate everything" and exhibited a "pride that ... should be an incentive to make this borough the greatest in the great municipality that was born when the City Hall bell tolled the hour of midnight."

The new Brooklyn borough president, Edward Grout, met the Common Council. Then, at 8:30 p.m. on the final day of the year, the ceremony began. Brooklyn's last mayor cited the growth of Brooklyn at the rate of 45,000 during the year. He pointed out that, while the city would no longer exist, the new borough would grow even greater. With misgiving, he alluded to the fact that the people of Brooklyn never had a proper referendum because the consolidation had been planned and engineered in Albany.

Then he introduced Dr. St. Clair McKelway, who had written Eagle editorials against the consolidation. McKelway stated, to loud applause, "In politics the only thing which fails is success, and the only thing which never loses is principle." In summary, he referred to Brooklyn's life as a city: "Brooklyn's finished record as a city is creditable and indestructible."

The evening ended with a poem read by its author, Will Carleton, called "The Passing of Brooklyn" after which the bells over City Hall chimed and Brooklyn joined New York forever.

The Eagle described the new year's weather as bright and fresh, greeting the new Tammany-backed mayor of Greater New York. Crowds gathered at Manhattan's City Hall on Jan. 1, 1898, anticipating "that the government of Greater New York would begin forthwith, a delusion that was soon dissipated ..."

The new mayor, Van Wyck, was greeted by outgoing mayors Strong of New York, Wurster of Brooklyn and Gleason of Long Island City as well as by Democrats from around the enlarged city.

The deed had been done.

Daily Eagle of Brooklyn and Queens welcomes opinions, both pro and con, on all subjects affecting our daily lives.

We also welcome responses to the published articles and opinions, which should be sent to opinions@brooklyneagle.com (Brooklyn) and opinions@queenspublicmedia.com (Queens).

Stay 'Positive': Queens Is First to Receive LIRR Safety Advancement

By Jonathan Sperling
Queens Daily Eagle

The Long Island Rail Road has begun rolling out a new "positive" safety feature on the Port Washington Branch — which means a safer trip for commuters travelling between Queens and Long Island.

Positive Train Control (PTC) was rolled out on the 16-mile stretch of tracks between Woodside and Port Washington on Dec. 17, becoming the first segment of the LIRR to receive enhanced train safety by using a network of computers that can communicate rail conditions in real time, according to the Metropolitan Transit Authority. The new feature will contribute to a reduction in train-to-train collisions, trains traveling into zones where railroad employees are working on tracks, or derailments caused by a train traveling too fast into a curve or into a misaligned switch.

"While no single technology can eliminate all risk, the introduction of PTC dramatically reduces the risk of train accidents," MTA Chief Safety Officer Patrick Warren said. "The MTA remains steadfast in its drive to sustain and improve safety measures in all aspects of the operation of its railroads."

The PTC system effectively eliminates the chance of human error by placing a network of computers along tracks and on trains that are in constant communication with a central hub.

Similar to how traffic lights signal to cars when they should speed up or slow down, lights along the LIRR's tracks flash red or green to indicate whether a train must stop or proceed. PTC works by detecting if a train is moving too fast for a given stretch of track and automatically steps in to slow or stop the train.

With the PTC system in place along the Port Washington Branch, LIRR riders in Woodside, Flushing, Murray Hill, Auburndale, Bayside, Douglaston and Little Neck will be in for a safer commute.

The LIRR will roll-out PTC across the entire network before the end of 2020, according to the MTA.

"The Long Island Rail Road's unceasing drive to introduce this important new safety system allowed us to overcome numerous challenging obstacles to reach this important milestone, and that we are very pleased to have introduced this new level of improved safety," said LIRR President Phil Eng. "Safety is a core value of the Long Island Rail Road, and we aggressively look for new and better ways to improve safety across the entire rail network."

MTA Rolls Out Special Transit Service For New Year's Holiday

By Jonathan Sperling
Queens Daily Eagle

New Year's revelers in Queens and elsewhere in the city may be able to navigate the holiday a bit easier thanks to enhanced train and bus service offered by the Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) this weekend.

For holiday travelers flying out of the city amid the New Year's rush, the LaGuardia Link Q70 Select Bus Service will run fare-free through Jan. 1. The bus provides non-stop service linking the main terminals of LaGuardia Airport (Terminals B, C and D) with the subway system at the Jackson Heights-Roosevelt Avenue No. 7/E/F/M/R train station and the 61 St-Woodside

No. 7 station-Long Island Rail Road (LIRR) stop.

For LIRR users, the MTA will operate 13 extra trains departing Penn Station between 12:46 p.m. and 3:48 p.m. today, including on the Far Rockaway and Port Washington branches. See the LIRR website for more details.

Beginning on Dec. 31, New Year's Eve, the LIRR will offer 13 extra trains departing Penn Station between 12:46 p.m. and 3:48 p.m. for straphangers looking to leave the city.

Those wishing to travel further into the city will benefit from the LIRR offering 21 extra trains to Penn Station and Atlantic Terminal.

If you plan on heading to Times Square for the festivities, avoid using the 42nd Street-Times Square subway complex, as street exits may be closed. The northbound platform at 50th Street on the No. 1 line and both north and southbound platforms at 49th Street on the N/Q/R/W lines will also closed from noon until just after midnight. The MTA instead urges riders to exit from stations at 50th Street, or 57th Street and walk to Times Square. Additional subway service will be provided.

The MTA also recommends that customers avoid taking buses to Times Square, as buses will be affected by street closures.

E/M riders will still be affected by previously-scheduled construction on the E/M line until 5 a.m. on Dec. 31.

Phony Cops Attempt Kidnapping Outside LIC Car Dealership

By Christina Carrega
Queens Daily Eagle

Two men are wanted for posing as cops and trying to kidnap a motorist who was waiting for his car to be serviced in Long Island City, police said.

A 28-year-old man was inside a Hyundai dealership on 44th Street near Northern Boulevard waiting for his car when two men approached him.

One of the men sprayed the customer with an unknown substance and said he was under arrest for "being a fugitive," the real police said.

The men attempted to remove the customer from the location in handcuffs, police said.

The victim struggled to fight the two men who then fled in a gray 2012 Dodge Caravan on Northern Boulevard.

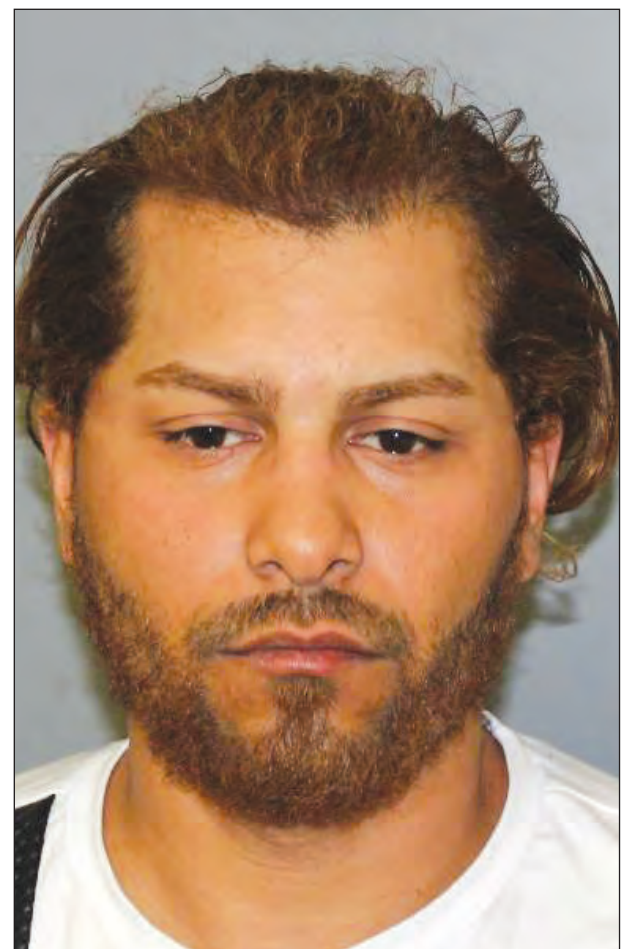

Police identified one of the impersonators as 40-year-old Jose Santiago-Cruz, who is a Hispanic man, 5-foot-6, 200 pounds with dark colored hair and brown eyes.

Anyone with information in regard to this incident is asked to call the NYPD's Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477) or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74782).

The public can also submit their tips by logging onto the Crime Stoppers website at NYPDCRIMESTOPPERS.COM, on Twitter @

NYPDTips or by texting their tips to 274637 (CRIMES) then enter TIP577.

All calls are strictly confidential.

Fabulous Fashion of ‘Mrs. Maisel’ Is More Than Just Attire

By Brooke Lefferts
The Associated Press

Fans of “The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel” know that the show’s clothes deliver eye-popping color and to-die-for style, but they might not know the costumes represent more than 1950s couture. They also meticulously reflect each character’s mood and development.

“Mrs. Maisel” also captures New York City itself, with key scenes set in outer borough locations like Queens’ Broad Channel and Downtown Brooklyn’s Dime Savings Bank.

Costume designer Donna Zakowska said she thought about how each character changed from Season One of the hit show to season two, which premiered on Amazon Prime Video earlier this month. Zakowska, born in Brooklyn, started out studying painting at Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris, which instilled a “very strong response to color,” she said in a recent interview, and that influenced her approach in costume design. One of her first decisions was putting lead character Midge Maisel, played by Rachel Brosnahan, in a baby pink coat in the first season when she is married and seemingly happy.

“I do feel that color signals things to people and you know I don’t take it for granted,” Zakowska said. “I love doing it and I put a lot of effort into really working with the palette and working with the colors. It started with that pink coat, but that became sort of a characteristic of who Midge was when I first started.

But when Midge’s husband leaves her, her character puts on different, darker colors.

“I basically did this with most of the characters and it’s a little bit natural in a way because I do think that there is this emotional response that is inherent in color,” Zakowska said.

Brosnahan said while the second season is full of “exceptional clothes,” the outfits aren’t just eye candy. Zakowska helps shape the narrative with her designs.

“She’s a storyteller. And she dives just as deeply, if not more deeply in some ways, than we do into these characters, into their arcs, into the stories, into the settings, into everything that came before and is yet to come.”

“She is a mad scientist,” “Maisel” creator Amy Sherman-Palladino said in a recent interview. “She doesn’t believe a hat is a hat. You know, a hat is character. It’s a person. That hat needs to reflect where the person is internally. She started it last year with ... the pink coat and the pink coat represented something and when Joel [Mr. Maisel] left, the pink coat left, because the pink coat represented who she was with Joel. And then pink went away for a while, and when pink started to come back, it was a different kind of pink because she was a different kind of woman. She’s [Zakowska is] just a very fascinating, brilliant person.”

Zakowska said she leads a crew of at least 25 people on set to dress the principal players and the extras in hundreds of costume changes. She pays strict attention to detail, even for day players, who often wear 1950s outfits found in vintage stores or on the internet. But most of the clothes worn by the principal characters are designed by Zakowska.

Not all the clothes are fun to wear. Zakowska said one of the most important accessories on the show is the underwear — which had to be tight and supportive, even for the extras.

“It’s like really the end of the era of the corset ... that’s something you really can’t avoid. We can’t all have period bras but we worked with Playtex and they had a certain bra they created for us that we used. And so you do to a degree have to sort of pull women in, you know, bring the bust up ... there’s no way around it, otherwise we couldn’t get people into those dresses.”

The second season provides much deeper insight into the characters, like Midge’s mother Rose, who leaves her uptight life in Manhattan and takes off to Paris, which Zakowska relays in color and style.

“In season one, I talked about the idea of her being like in a little Chanel suit or being the perfect mother on the Upper West Side. Now her power has really taken on ... these deep purple and deep red tones, sort of very intense romantic palette. And so what she’s really doing is revisiting that bohemian student life when she begins Season Two. And so it was really important to heighten her palette and to work with those colors, and I think they’re very Parisian,” Zakowska said.

Marin Hinkle, who plays Rose, said wearing the costumes helped her get into character.

“The first season, Rose had a kind of muted quality,” Hinkle said. “And then by the second season they dressed me in these more vibrant colors and more youthful styles. And that dictates a kind of way you can be as a performer where you literally are putting something on and sort of 90 percent of the work is done.”

Tony Shalhoub, who plays Rose’s husband, said of Zakowska’s designs, “It’s almost like the clothes are a character themselves and ... it’s like the clothes are speaking to us through us.

“I’m always sort of jazzed and energized by that,” he said.

NYC Traffic Deaths Decreased to Lowest Level on Record

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

Overall traffic deaths declined in New York City in 2018 and were on track to reach their lowest level since 1910, Mayor Bill de Blasio announced on Friday. As of Dec. 27, 196 people had been killed in vehicle crashes citywide and the number of cyclists and vehicle occupants killed in collisions dropped to all-time lows. The streets remained a dangerous place for pedestrians, however: At least 150 pedestrians were killed in traffic crashes this year, according to city data. De Blasio credited the Vision Zero initiative for the overall decrease in traffic deaths, which have dropped 34 percent since 2013. Last year, 222 people died in New York City vehicle crashes. “With each passing year, New Yorkers continue to see Vision Zero save lives,” de Blasio said. “Over the last five years, we have lowered the speed limit, increased enforcement and designed hundreds of safer streets. But no loss of life on our streets is acceptable, and the twelve pedestrians killed so far this past month are a sober reminder that this new milestone is less a cause for celebration than a reminder that even with this year’s success, we have much more to do to meet our ambitious goal.” Of the 196 people killed this year, 10 were cyclists — down from 24 cyclist deaths in 2017 — and 36 were vehicle occupants, down from 58 in 2017. State Sen.-elect Jessica Ramos praised the Vision Zero initiative, which includes a citywide speed limit reduction, the addition of more bike lanes and infrastructure improvements that make city streets safer for pedestrians. “Vision Zero has saved lives in our community,” said Ramos, who represents Senate District 13 in Queens. “Cyclists and pedestrians have all seen the greatest benefit from the efforts of the program. Street redesign, like the one needed on Northern Boulevard, expanded bike lanes and fewer cars on the road have made the streets safer for all our families, but we will not rest until there are zero deaths year after year.” Queens Assembly Member Michael DenDekker said the overall decrease in traffic deaths was a positive development, but the city still had to embark on several projects to improve safety. “Although I am extremely pleased with the overall reduction in traffic fatalities I still believe that there is much more work to be done,” DenDekker said. “We need an expansion of the speed camera program, increased penalties for vehicles with multiple camera violations and traffic lights that allow pedestrians to cross the street without any vehicle moving.”

Survivor Sues Rapist to Recoup Cash Perp Received In 2017 Court Settlement

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

A survivor of sexual violence is suing her rapist in Queens Civil Supreme Court to obtain a chunk of cash the rapist received in a settlement with the state related to spinal injuries he experienced in prison. Michael Blaylock, the defendant in the lawsuit, was convicted of first-degree rape and second-degree rape and sentenced to up to 25 years in prison by the Nassau County Supreme Court in May 1997. The victim — the plaintiff in the lawsuit filed in Queens on Dec. 18 — was 14-years-old at the time of the sexual assault in January 1995 and Blaylock was 39. The woman’s name is being withheld by the Eagle because she’s a victim of sexual assault. Blaylock was paroled in August 2016, according to court documents.

During his time in prison, Blaylock sustained spinal injuries and, in July 2007, sued the state in federal court for the Eastern District of New York in a case known as Baylock v. Christin Montalbano. Blaylock alleged that the state prison system had violated his federal constitutional rights “related to his injury and to correctional officials’ subsequent deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs,” according to court documents. In May 2017, Blaylock and the State of New York agreed to a $30,000 settlement. Ten percent of that settlement went to the attorney who represented Blaylock. New York State Office of Victim Services obtained an order of protection to freeze the payment to Blaylock citing the Son of Sam Law, which prevents individuals from profiting from crimes they committed.

Martin R. Kanfer from the firm Kanfer Law filed a lawsuit against Blaylock on behalf of the victim who Blaylock had raped in 1995. In the court filing, Kanfer stated that the plaintiff suffered “severe and serious physical injuries” as well as mental health effects from the rape. Kanfer also said that the plaintiff experienced a financial and vocational impact and is thus entitled to the Blaylock’s settlement. “Plaintiff was prevented from following her usual vocation for a period of time and was further caused to be prevented from enjoying the normal fruits of her activities, both social and economic, all resulting in substantial monetary expense and loss,” Kanfer wrote. Kanfer did not immediately respond to request for comment.

‘Abusive’ Principal Pushed Teacher Out Of School, Lawsuit Says

By Christina Carrega
Queens Daily Eagle

A Woodhaven elementary school teacher hopes to slap her boss with a $3 million lawsuit for causing her take a medical leave of absence for his “misogynistic tone.” For 11 years, Christine Reeves has educated students at P.S. 60Q where Frank DeSario is the principal. Reeves said that, for unknown reasons, she began receiving “angry, abusive, intimidating” behavior from DeSario on a regular basis during the 2016 school year. On three occasions DeSario called Reeves into his office where she was greeted by her own father, according to the petition filed in Queens Civil Supreme Court on Dec. 20. Reeves said she spent up to two hours in the office and away from students on each occasion, according to the petition. During those meetings, DeSario discussed Reeves’ employment with Reeves’ father, shared his views about other female staffers and made derogatory comments the students, the petition said. DeSario said the other women were “nothing but bitches,” described the student population as “1200 urchins” and said that it had become more difficult dealing with parents and students since “the neighborhood had changed,” according to the court documents. During other meetings, DeSario bullied, threatened, browbeat and loudly reprimanded Reeves about alleged infractions that she had not committed and other petty matters such as penmanship and bulletin boards, the documents read. “He also bullied and verbally abused her in front of students, parents and colleagues, making false accusations against her, impugning her professionalism, and engaging in egregious personal attacks,” according to the documents. Reeves filed the court documents to request a judge grant permission to file a late notice of claim — the first step before filing a lawsuit against the city — against the Department of Education (DOE) and DeSario. “We will review Ms. Reeves’ petition and respond accordingly,” said Nicholas Paolucci, a spokesman with the city’s law department, which represents the DOE. The second-grade teacher is seeking $3 million in damages for emotional distress, anxiety, humiliation, injury to reputation, emotional harm, pain and suffering, career, family and social disruption and other grievous harm. As the months passed, DeSario allegedly took his abusive tactics to another level in June by issuing an inaccurate and “damning performance review that falsely characterized her teaching performance,” the petition read. DeSario then reassigned Reeves in August back to teaching kindergarten. Before the school year began in September, Reeves used her accumulated sick days instead of dealing with “further abuse from Mr. DeSario.” During her month off, Reeves was diagnosed by two separate doctors as suffering from extreme emotional distress that is “caused by the conduct she experienced at the hands of Mr. DeSario,” the petition read. In October, Reeves was approved to take a medical leave until the end of January. During her time off, Reeves filed complaints with the superintendent who assured her that a thorough investigation would occur. Three weeks later, Reeves was informed that no further action would be taken by the superintendent. Reeves also notified her union representative. The union filed its own grievances against DeSario, according to the court documents. Before filing the petition in civil court, Reeves “attempted” to reach out to DOE officials, to no avail, according to court documents. Reeves is represented by Patrick J. Walsh of Broach and Stulberg. Queens Civil Court Judge Duane Hart was assigned to the case. DeSario, who started working for the DOE in 1991, became principal at Q060 in 2004. He earned over $163,000 this year. DeSario and the United Federation of Teachers did not provide comment as of press time.

Elizabeth Willis and the Curious Case of the NYC Newsstand

magazines amid the Midtown bustle.

Willis has many loyal customers and she says she is one of the only black women operating a newsstand in all of New York City. A recent customer seemed to back up that assertion.

“I have never seen a black person [working] at the [stand],” a customer shouted to Willis while an Eagle reporter interviewed her at her stand.

“If I were to lose this [stand] I probably wouldn’t live two or three months after this,” Willis said to the Eagle. If she died, she added, she would come back to haunt the stand in the afterlife.

“This stuff is like my home,” she said. “It’s my life.”

Despite her passion for her work, things became muddled for Willis in 2003, when the City Council passed a law to take ownership of individual newsstands away from operators and put all stands in the hands of a single franchise. The measure, endorsed by then-Mayor Michael Bloomberg, enabled a franchise to replace all of the stands and maintain them at the company’s own expense in order to regulate the look of the streetscape.

Before the measure passed, operators paid to put up their own stands, and many were a hodgepodge of different colors, styles, parts and utilities.

In return for maintaining newsstand uniformity and upkeep, the franchise that won the contract to renovate the newsstands would receive revenue from advertisements erected on the sides of the stands. The city would receive a piece of the profits, but the stand operators were cut out of the advertising deal. Instead, they made money from the items they sell.

That was not the first time the city government had contemplated standardizing the stands. In 1997, the city passed a similar law, but it was repealed a year later.

The New York City Newsstand Operators Association sued to try and block the 2003 law, arguing that the law seized newsstands without just compensation to the owners, but the New York Supreme Court ruled against the newsstand trade group.

Willis said her stand was renovated in 2008 by Cemusa — the company that eventually won the contract with the city to erect and own the newsstands in addition to replacing bus shelters and public toilets.

Questions quickly arose about Cemusa’s ability to deliver on the $1 billion deal. A lawsuit filed by the contract’s losing bidders claimed the city unfairly favored Cemusa in the bidding process and that it was “an inexperienced undercapitalized foreign company,” according to court documents. In 2015, Cemusa was eventually bought out by one of the losing bidders — the street furniture giant JCDcaux. Street furniture is the term used for sidewalk structures like newsstands and bus shelters.

“Prior to the Cemusa (now JCDcaux) franchise agreement, newsstand operators owned their stands. In accordance with Local Law 64 of 2003, existing newsstand operators were provided with new, high quality newsstands at no cost,” a Department of Transportation spokesperson told the Eagle. Existing operators were free to remove their stands to make way for the replacement stands. New operators pay a fee to the franchisee to construct and install new newsstands, which is also pursuant to LL 64.”

Some stand operators told the The New York Times in 2008 that Cemusa was slow to build the stands and said that faulty locks and leaking roofs remained problems. For her part, Willis does not like the design of the stand, and prefers her old one.

“I did not ask for this piece of garbage,” Willis said.

After the 2008 renovation, she said, she started receiving multiple violations from the Department of Consumer Affairs (DCA), which inspects newsstands, for business practices that she says she had been doing without a problem before the renovation.

DCA provides a plain-language checklist for operators to better understand rules they must follow. In recent violations from June and July, she was found to be selling hats, which is not allowed, altering the newsstand by affixing lights and an ATM machine to it and selling unauthorized items for over $10, which is also not allowed. Willis also sells her own advertisement space on the door of her stand independent of JCDcaux.

“Unfortunately, Ms. Willis continues to violate the law that DCA enforces. Over the years, DCA has received a number of complaints about unauthorized advertising on Ms. Willis’ newsstand,” a spokesperson from the DCA said in an email to the Eagle. The spokesperson said Willis had received five violations since 2014 for unauthorized advertising.

A spokesman for JCDcaux also confirmed Willis had violated her license by selling unauthorized ads.

Willis maintains, however,

Elizabeth Willis said she is own of the only black women operating a newsstand in New York City.

that she never signed documents releasing the stand to the city and was never compensated for it.

“I never had no problem until they put the [new] stand up here,” Willis said, in reference to the violations she has received. “Stuff that I’ve been doing for the last 30 years. Never no complaint.”

Even with newsstands’ current limitations, applications for new ones have hovered between 50 and 60 each year since 2015. Though newspaper and magazine sales have declined, the number of applications has remained steady as the stands depend more on revenue from candy, snack and beverage sales.

Despite facing fines, Willis said she hopes to continue operating the stand for years to come.

“This means a lot to me,” she said. “This is my second home.”

Blue Lights, Big City

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

Bright blue lights illuminated New York City on Thursday night, confusing, frightening and later inspiring residents, who tweeted countless jokes and observations about what turned out to be an explosion at a Con Edison substation in Astoria. There were no reported injuries.

Minutes after the explosion, Con Edison told the Eagle that “a couple of transformers tripped” at 20th Avenue and 32nd Street, casting a bright light over the area and causing a “loud boom.” Later in the evening, a Con Edison spokesman said the explosion actually “involved some of our large electrical equipment.”

The electrical flash emanated from a malfunction involving 20-foot-high equip-ment with cables carrying 138,000 volts. By comparison, a standard U.S.

household gets 120-volt service.

“It was like a lightning bolt, essentially,” said Con Edison spokesman Bob McGee.

“We initially thought it was transformers, but now looks like it was not transformers,” McGee told the Eagle. “Our crews arrived and FDNY arrived, but the fire put itself out before FDNY came.”

The explosion caused some homes to lose power, according to the live Con Edison outage map, and forced officials at LaGuardia airport to ground flights until about 11 p.m. A Con Edison spokesman said LaGuardia quickly switched their power source to back-up generators.

Substations reduce electricity that comes in from power plants at high voltages to lower voltage levels and send it elsewhere for use.

to the affected equipment if there’s an electrical fault, but that apparently didn’t happen Thursday, McGee said.

Instead, the electricity kept cycling through, causing the flash.

Mayor Bill de Blasio

also informed New Yorkers that the light was caused by an electrical surge at the ConEdison substation.

The MTA maintained power, but there were delays on the No. 7 train. Service resumed with heavy delays shortly before 11 p.m., according to the MTA.

After the explosion, Rikers Island jails lost power for 25 minutes, The New York Times reported.

Onlookers invoked supernatural and sci-fi screen classics — “Ghostbusters,” “Independence Day,” “Close Encounters of the Third Kind” and more. There was, of course, a hashtag — #alieninvasion — and a tongue-in-cheek take on a real scientific phenomenon: the “Astoria Borealis.”

“It was pitch black outside, and then suddenly the whole side of the eastern sky was lighting up and changing colors,” said Madeleine Frank Reeves, who saw the lights from her Upper West Side apartment.

Con Edison and the city will continue investigating the cause of the explosion, a Con Edison spokesman said.

Queens Library Accused of Violating Artist's First Amendment Rights

By Victoria Merlino
Queens Daily Eagle

A free speech advocacy organization is urging the Queens Library to re-open a canceled art exhibition after the library said it was uncomfortable displaying photos of people who were photographed without consent. The National Coalition Against Censorship released a letter accusing the Queens Library of violating artist Drew Kerr's First Amendment rights by canceling his exhibition "Faces of the 7 Train."

The exhibition consisted of 32 black-and-white photos and featured the faces of No. 7 train commuters across a span of six years. The coalition said that library officials were concerned that the exhibition would leave unsuspecting riders open to identification by law enforcement and agencies like the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).

The exhibition was supposed to run from Dec. 14 to Jan. 3 at the Queens Library's Flushing branch.

"Several court rulings uphold that art photographers' right to free expression includes the right to take surreptitious images for artistic purposes whenever the subjects are visible in a public space," the coalition said in a letter.

"While we appreciate the effort of the General Deputy Counsel to protect all Queens residents, including undocumented immigrants, it is confounding how anonymous portraits of 7 train commuters, taken over a long period of time, could put them at risk,"

The coalition recommended that the library reschedule the exhibition within the first three months of 2019.

"We are reviewing the letter and plan to respond soon," a spokeswoman for the Queens Library told the Eagle via email.

Mega-Corporation Amazon Seeks Community Liaison to Soothe Angry Community

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

Good luck with that. Empire State Development (ESD) is recruiting a "community liaison" to assuage a community that has condemned the pending arrival of online retailer and data repository Amazon.

On Dec. 27, ESD, which is shepherding the Amazon deal, posted a "community liaison" job listing on the website Indeed.com. The role pays $58,500 per year — no word on whether that includes a free Prime membership.

According to the job listing, the "basic function" of the role is to "manage community relations and outreach for Amazon LIC project."

The job requires a college degree and "community relations, coalition-building, multi-tasking [and] good organization" skills and a "working knowledge of the Long Island City community. Fluency in Spanish a plus."

The community liaison will work with Queens Community Boards 1 and 2, elected officials and community organizations and "help develop and implement community outreach strategy for Amazon LIC project."

In November, Gov. Andrew Cuomo and Mayor Bill de Blasio announced that the city and state would give Amazon roughly $3 billion in tax incentives to set up a corporate campus in Long Island City. Various community organizations and local leader have criticized the deal, which sidesteps the city's Uniform Land Use Review Policy.

Despite the vocal backlash, a December Quinnipiac poll suggested that a majority of New York City residents support the Amazon deal.
