WILLETS POINT AND FORT TOTTEN MAY BE NYC FERRY'S NEXT PORTS OF CALL

New York City has moved full steam ahead with a large-scale ferry expansion plan and Northeast Queens may be the system's next ports of call. On Monday, Councilmember Paul Vallone announced that he had received word from the Economic Development Corporation (EDC) that the EDC has included the Citi Field Marina in Willets Point and Fort Totten in Bayside in its Ferry Feasibility Study, which began earlier this fall. BOROUGH HALL HOSTS TOY DRIVE

A Holiday Toy Drive at Queens Borough Hall will run through Dec. 20. Queens Borough President Melinda Katz encouraged residents to donate new toiletries, toys and board games for children of all ages. "This is a time to rejoice with our families and give thanks for the blessings in our lives," Katz said. "In the spirit of giving, please consider donating to make sure kids across the borough will share in the joy of this holiday season."

DE BLASIO AND CUOMO UNVEIL MEMBERS OF AMAZON COMMUNITY COMMITTEE

Last month, Mayor Bill de Blasio and Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced an agreement with Amazon that would allow the tech giant to circumvent the community review process as it builds a massive corporate campus in Long Island City. This time around, the two leaders reconvened to unveil a plan to form a Community Advisory Committee (CAC) to help shepherd the project. According to a statement, the 45-member CAC is made up of "community and citywide stakeholders recommended by local elected officials" tasked with ensuring that local residents fill the 25,000 jobs Amazon says it will bring to town.

A Colombian man who traveled to the United States to build a better life for his family will instead spend the at least 25 years in prison for stabbing a woman to death in Jamaica Hills during a botched robbery.

Yonathan Galvez-Marin was sentenced to 25 years to life in Queens Supreme Court Tuesday morning for killing Nazma Khanam to death in 2016.

"My mother was a teacher her whole life," said Nazmul Alam Khan during his victim impact statement on Tuesday morning. "She was a very good person."

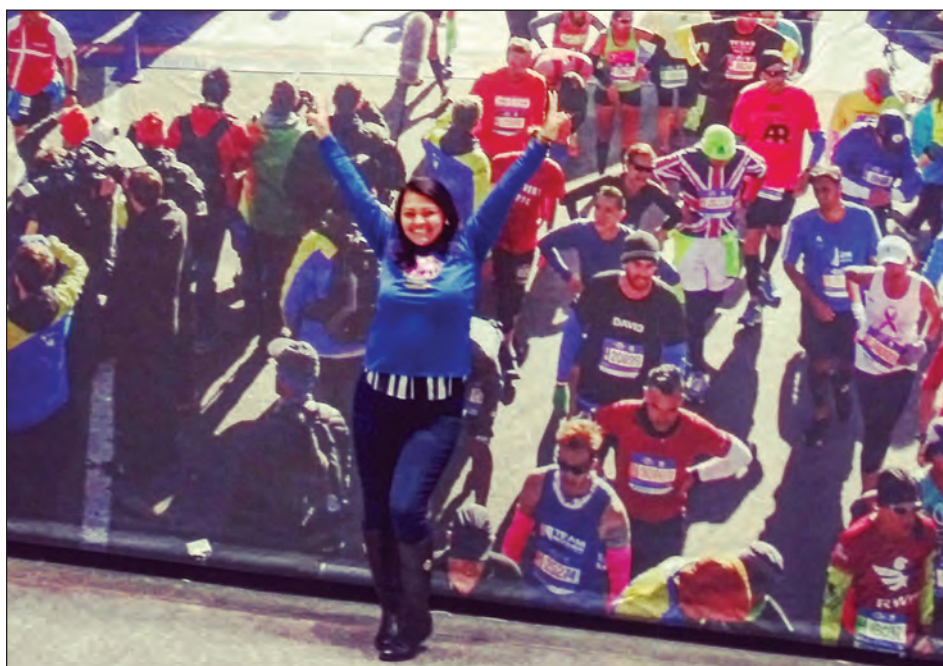

Khan, 30, spoke in Queens Supreme Court during Galvez-Marin's sentencing. He was convicted after a jury trial for stabbing Khanam to death.

Khanam, 60, was enjoying a summer walk with her husband in August 2016 on Normal Road when Galvez-Marin approached her and demanding “dinero.”

Galvez-Marin, 25, stabbed the beloved mother once with a kitchen knife and ran away to a nearby corner where he smoked marijuana, according to court testimony.

“You watched as her husband came to grips and agonized over losing his wife,” said Queens Supreme Court Justice Michael Aloise, who scolded Galvez-Marin for ruining several lives — his own and Khanam’s family members’.

Khanam’s nephew, NYPD Officer Humayan Kabir, told Aloise that it pains him to look at his uncle, Khanam’s husband.

“My uncle, when I look at his face it’s as if he aged 10 years in two,” said Kabir who fought back tears. “It’s a coward who did this. My aunt didn’t deserve to die like that.”

Galvez-Marin’s attorney Frank Kelly asked Justice Aloise to give leniency to his client who was an exceptional member of society and who was never arrested before.

“This doesn’t seem like this individual,” Kelly said.

Galvez-Marin was honorably discharged from the Colombian Marines and regarded as an “excellent” member of a student symphony, Kelly said.

“He came to New York, worked in Brooklyn as a busboy to try and support himself ... this not the type of person to get into this,” he added.

Galvez-Marin, who spoke through a Spanish interpreter, maintained his innocence.

“The statements I made to the police were made by many motives,” said Galvez-Marin. “The police knew I was under the influence of drugs and took advantage. Since I was the only person who passed by on camera, they arrested me.”

Nonetheless, Aloise and Assistant District Attorney Rachel Buchter said the death of Khanam was heinous and senseless.

“This person should never walk the streets again,” Buchter said. “The only just sentence is the maximum of 25 years to life.”

Justice Aloise agreed.

ALLEGED LEADERS OF NYPD BROTHEL RING RETURN TO COURT

Former NYPD Vice Squad Detective Ludwig Paz and his wife Arelis Peralta are charged with promoting prostitution and enterprise corruption for allegedly masterminding a multi-million dollar prostitution and gambling ring. They return to K20 for a conference.

Three other defendants, who were all released on their own recognizance, appear in court.

Prosecutors say Paz and Peralta operated eight brothels in Brooklyn and Queens with the help of seven NYPD officers who served as informants. In October, Peralta appeared in Queens Criminal Court where her attorney Victoria Brown-Douglas filed a bail application to have her bond reduced from $400,000 to $300,000. Brown-Douglas argued that Peralta was a victim of “NYPD pimps.”

“This is an NYPD case and my client is not a member of the service,” Brown-Douglas said. “At best, the district attorney is saying she’s the wife of an NYPD pimp.”

Justice Ronald Hollie denied a bail reduction for Peralta.

Brown-Douglas also accused the district attorney’s office of holding Peralta “hostage” even as the prosecutors received “millions of dollars to protect victims of domestic violence.”

Prosecutors offered Peralta a plea deal of four to 12 years in prison.

Paz did not appear in court at his last date.

Prosecutors also offered Paz a plea bargain of five to 15 years in prison. His attorney Frank Kelly said he would share the deal with Paz.

“It’s up to him whether it should be considered,” Kelly said.

A courthouse source told the Eagle in October they expected Paz to reject the deal.

FAR ROCKAWAY HIT AND RUN SUSPECT RETURNS TO COURT

Far Rockaway resident Agostinho Sinclair is charged with first-degree reckless endangerment, endangering the welfare of a child and other crimes for allegedly hitting an 11-year-old boy with his car and fleeing the scene in August. Sinclair appears in AP6 for a conference.

“The defendant is accused of driving his vehicle without a license and while doing so, colliding with a young boy riding his bike,” district Attorney Richard Brown said in a statement. “To add insult to injury, the defendant did not bother to stop to offer the injured child aid and instead fled the scene. The defendant’s alleged actions showed a wanton and reckless disregard for human life.”

The boy was riding his bicycle eastbound on Healy Avenue near Dickens Street in Far Rockaway night when the car struck him just before 8 p.m. on a Monday evening.

Video surveillance footage allegedly shows Sinclair’s car striking the boy who was riding a bicycle. The dark-colored sedan did not have a front license plate and appeared to have an out-of-state rear license plate.

SON WHO BEAT FATHER TO DEATH IN DRUNKEN BRAWL APPEARS IN COURT

Dimitrios Safetis pleaded guilty to second-degree assault after beating his father to death with a steering wheel club following a drunken brawl in 2016. Safetis appears in W50 for a compliance update.

The altercation began after Dimitrios’ father Ioannis Safetis, 57, received a call from his ex-wife alerting him that his two sons were drunk and fighting in her home in Auburndale. The woman was the former stepmother of the sons, and the boys were partying with her 20-year-old son. Ioannis drove over to the home and proceeded to yell at the woman, her son and his sons.

Ioannis next returned to his car and retrieved the club steering wheel lock. Dimitrios, who was 19 at the time of the incident, fought with his father, took control of the club from his father and smashed him in the head with the object.

“It doesn’t surprise me,” a neighbor told the Daily News. “I hope the children will be in a better place, because he’s not exactly a great father to them.”

Ex-Head of New York's Polytechnic Institute Faces Sentencing

By Larry Neumeister
The Associated Press

The ex-president of the State University of New York's Polytechnic Institute is facing sentencing in the corruption of Gov. Andrew Cuomo's "Buffalo Billion" economic redevelopment program.

Alain Kaloyeros, born in Beirut in 1956, was the school's president when the Democratic governor tapped him to help a quest to create high-tech jobs in upstate New York.

His lawyers say Cuomo looked to Kaloyeros for expertise after the administration of Republican ex-Gov. George Pataki successfully teamed up with Kaloyeros years earlier to bring semiconductor manufacturing to the Albany area.

Yesterday, Kaloyeros was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison.

Kaloyeros, who led the Polytechnic Institute until he resigned in October 2016, was convicted in July of conspiracy and wire fraud after prosecutors presented evidence that the bidding process for the project was rigged to benefit a Buffalo developer and a Syracuse development company.

Federal sentencing guidelines call for a prison term of over 11 years, but even the government concedes that is too much for a fraud that stretched from 2013 through 2015.

Prosecutors said in a sentencing submission to U.S. District Judge Valerie E. Caproni that Kaloyeros was more active than three convicted co-defendants in perpetrating the fraud. His co-defendants have already been sentenced to prison terms ranging from two to three years.

In a defense submission, lawyers for Kaloyeros urged the judge to consider alternatives to incarceration or as little as four months of incarceration if prison is necessary. They noted his tough life, including being the victim in a terrorist attack in war-torn Beirut and being wounded by shrapnel while driving a Red Cross van of injured militiamen before coming to the U.S. in 1980 to pursue a doctorate in physics.

They cited their client's longtime dedication to teaching and advising students and said he had made a difference in their lives and in promoting science education in upstate New York.

Even since his arrest, he has continued to work on research, co-authoring five scientific articles and submitting four patent applications, his lawyers said.

The prosecution of Kaloyeros was part of a broader case that involved bribes paid to a former top aide to Cuomo who ran the governor's 2014 re-election campaign.

Cuomo once called Kaloyeros his "economic guru" and the governor invited him to appear at the announcement of various economic development projects.

Cuomo was not accused of wrongdoing himself in either case, but the corruption allegations have left a cloud over his administration.

In this July 12 photo, Alain Kaloyeros, a former president of the State University of New York's Polytechnic Institute, arrives to federal court in New York. NYC Transit Speeds Up Some of its Trains

The Associated Press

New York City is changing rules and speeding up some of its trains in an effort to improve subway service.

The New York Times reports that New York City Transit increased train speeds on two lines in Brooklyn from 15 mph to as much as 30 mph over the weekend. The agency's president, Andy Byford, plans to speed up other lines in the coming months.

Officials instituted strict speed rules for safety reasons following serious crashes in the 1990s. That contributed to system delays.

Byford says efficient signaling will allow trains to travel safely at higher speeds.

A "speed unit" created by Byford has recommended 130 locations where speeds should be increased.

Four Journalists and a Newspaper Are Time's Person of the Year

By Shawn Marsh
The Associated Press

Time magazine named four journalists and a newspaper yesterday as its 2018 Person of the Year for what it said was standing up for the truth in the face of persecution and violence.

The group, which Time called "the guardians," consists of slain Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi; the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Maryland, where five people were shot to death at the newspaper's offices in June; Philippine journalist Maria Ressa, who has been arrested; and Reuters journalists Wa Lone and Kyaw Soe Oo, who have been detained in Myanmar for nearly a year.

"They are representative of a broader fight by countless others around the world — as of Dec. 10, at least 52 journalists have been murdered in 2018 — who risk all to tell the story of our time," Editor-in-Chief Edward Felsenthal wrote in an essay.

Time selected them "for taking great risks in pursuit of greater truths, for the imperfect but essential quest for facts that are central to civil discourse, for speaking up and speaking out."

Khashoggi was killed two months ago when The Washington Post columnist, who had lived in the U.S., visited Saudi Arabia's consulate in Turkey for paperwork so he could get married. He had been critical of the Saudi regime.

Ressa is an award-winning Philippine journalist who, along with the online news service she heads, has been accused of tax evasion. Her website has been critical of the government of Philippines President Rodrigo Duterte, and she claims the charges are politically motivated.

Wa Lone and Kyaw Soe Oo have been imprisoned for nearly a year in Myanmar after investigating a massacre of Rohingya Muslims.

Four journalists and a sales assistant were killed by a gunman at the Capital Gazette newspaper last spring.

Forty-six journalists worldwide were killed in 2017, according to data collected by the Committee to Protect Journalists. The nonprofit group reported 50 deaths in 2016 and 73 in 2015. There were 262 journalists imprisoned worldwide in 2017.

Since 1927, Time has selected individuals or groups to appear on its cover for the end-of-the-year feature. This was the first time someone named was no longer alive. Those chosen this year will appear in four different cover photos.

President Donald Trump, who was chosen Person of the Year in 2016, was runner-up. "His ultimate impact may be determined as much by the resistance he engenders as by the goals he pursues," the magazine said.

Special counsel Robert Mueller, who is leading the investigation into contacts between Trump associates and Russia, was the next runner-up.

What Public Universities Must Do to Regain Public Support

By Stephen M Gavazzi
The Conversation

Universities have lost public support in recent years. In order to get it back, college presidents should worry less about how their institutions fare in college rankings and focus more on affordability, great teaching and doing research that matters most to the communities they serve.

Those are among the key recommendations that various stakeholders make in the newly released book “Land-Grant Universities for the Future: Higher Education for the Public Good.”

The book comes at a time when an increasing number of Americans — mostly Republicans — have lost confidence in higher education. For instance, a 2017 Gallup survey found that while 56 percent of Democrats and Democratic-leaning individuals had a great deal or a lot of confidence in higher education, only 33 percent of Republican or Republican-leaning individuals did.

For the “Land-Grant Universities for the Future” book, my co-author — West Virginia University president E. Gordon Gee — and I interviewed 27 presidents and chancellors about the current issues facing public universities. Several themes arose.

We then ran those themes past people who work outside of a university but who still have an interest in higher education, such as lawmakers, college accreditors and community leaders.

Unlike the university presidents, many of whom noted the pressure they were under to maintain or increase their stature in U.S. News and World Report and other lists, stakeholders weren’t concerned with how well a university did in college rankings. Instead, they were concerned with how well the institution was serving the public. Here’s a portion of what they recommended.

1. Demonstrate Efficiency

Before university leaders ask for more state support, they must demonstrate that they are being more efficient with the funding they currently get. Those universities leading the way on this front — including exemplars such as the University of Wisconsin system and The Ohio State University — are directly connecting savings gained from lower operational costs with noticeable reductions in the cost of attending college. In fact, Ohio and Wisconsin were ranked No. 1 and No. 9, respectively, in lowest tuition increases over the last decade.

2. Focus on Teaching Well

There also should be much greater emphasis placed on high-quality instruction of both undergraduate and graduate students. More and more universities seem to be getting this message, as recent teaching “centers of excellence” have sprung up in such geographically diverse institutions as Boston College, the University of South Carolina and the University of Oklahoma. These centers all promote a similar message that great teaching really matters at the university level. While rock-solid evidence of what constitutes effective teaching is still lacking, most of these efforts are built on the commonsense notion that instructor self-awareness goes a long way toward increased teacher effectiveness.

3. Engage the Community

Colleges shouldn’t be isolated places where learning takes place only with students on campus. Instead, colleges must do more to engage the communities in which they are based. That’s what San Jose State University is doing through its award-winning CommUniver-City initiative. Through the initiative, the university partners with the city, local businesses, nonprofits and residents on a variety of projects. The projects range from “tactical urbanism” projects to liven up small parts of the city to a nutrition and garden education program meant to teach children to live healthier lives.

CommUniverCity is part of a trend of increased interest in community engagement, as evidenced in the growing number of colleges that successfully apply for the Carnegie Foundation’s Classification for Community Engagement and the Innovation and Economic Prosperity designation awarded by the Association for Public and Land-Grant Universities. Using the Innovation and Economic Prosperity designation as an example, there were only 16 universities with that designation in 2013. As of this year, 63 universities have been given that designation.

4. Do Research that Matters

When research is conducted, it should be easy for the public to recognize the immediate benefits. Perhaps most well-known are the results generated from the research conducted at university medical centers, such as the latest breakthrough on spotting early stage cancer through a blood test developed at Johns Hopkins University. Beyond medicine, universities also must be involved in the most pressing social ills. For example, researchers from a variety of disciplines at West Virginia University — from behavioral medicine and psychology to economics — are collaborating to battle the opiate crisis that is raging in that state.

5. Focus on Affordability, Not Rankings

National rankings are meaningless, especially if a college degree is not both affordable for and accessible to qualified students. But while colleges are under pressure to stay or become affordable, they also face increased demand for amenities such as upscale dorms and state-of-the-art recreational facilities. This means tough choices must be made. Many universities are now erring on the side of cost containment. The University of California system’s new affordable student housing initiative provides perhaps one of the best and most recent examples in this regard. The initiative involves 14,000 new affordable student housing beds by fall of 2020.

Of course, difficult decisions demand leadership. Which brings us back to the university presidents and chancellors we interviewed for our study. Importantly, when asked to describe future threats to public universities, many of these leaders mentioned the dangers associated with complacency. Is that future already here? Are universities now the victims of their own previous successes?

Evidence from opinion polls such as the Gallup survey and the Pew Research Trust survey indicates the clear and present danger that complacency poses to the nation’s support for its public universities. Presidents and chancellors who ignore the public’s demands for change at their universities — to become more efficient, value great teaching, conduct research that solves real-life problems, be more affordable and accessible to the widest range of students — do so at their own peril.

Flushing Marathoner Taps Into Reservoir of Courage With Support From Her Justice

She began running to help manage her mental and physical health and take back control of her life. She rediscovered a passion for exercise and running, which translated to an improved sense of self.

“Every time I was feeling blue or in a depressive mood, I would go out running and I would feel better,” Ana said.

Ana continued running with a group of veterans and civilians through a program called Team Red, White and Blue (Team RWB), which addresses the physical, mental, and emotional wellbeing of its members.

In 2017, she completed her first New York City Marathon. In November, she completed her second, despite injuring her ankle along the route.

While running with her fellow RWB members, she came to understand that she had Post Traumatic Stress Disorder related to childhood trauma of watching her stepfather abuse her mother, she said.

As an adult, Ana’s own relationships were marred by domestic violence.

“I grew up in a domestic violence environment and I grew up seeing this,” she said. “When I started dated, I encountered abusive people, but to me it was normal because it was what I grew up with. The abuse started mentally at first and it broke my confidence as a woman.”

Ana said that when her partner abused her in front of her daughter, she recalled watching her mother get attacked.

“Something deep inside me knew it wasn’t right and I said, ‘I have to put a stop to this. I have to break the cycle,’” she said.

Ana, an office manager at a Brooklyn mechanic’s shop, connected with the organization Her Justice, which provides free legal assistance to women living in poverty, including immigrants and survivors of domestic violence. Nearly one-third of Her Justice clients live in Queens, according to the organization.

“Last year Her Justice was able to provide free legal help to more than 9,000 women and children in NYC, a growing proportion of whom reside in Queens,” said Her Justice Executive Director Amy Barasch. “We do this by training and mentoring volunteer lawyers from firms across the city to be able to help with family, matrimonial and immigration cases.”

Barasch said attorneys who would like more information about volunteering with Her Justice can visit herjustice.org.

Her Justice paired Ana with pro bono attorneys who helped her obtain a visa for undocumented immigrants who are victims of crimes. For the first time, Ana had documented status in the United States.

“It was a relief,” she said, adding that she has since applied for permanent residence.

She said she now plans to pursue a job as a surgical technologist, a profession she studied in school.

“I was unable to practice my career because of my documents, but now I can,” she said. “I believe that 2019 is going to be a great year for me.”

After Sidestepping ULURP, Cuomo And de Blasio Announce Amazon Community Advisory Committee

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

Last month, Mayor Bill de Blasio and Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced an agreement with Amazon that would allow the tech giant to circumvent the community review process as it builds a massive corporate campus in Long Island City.

This time around, the two leaders reconvened to unveil a plan to form a Community Advisory Committee (CAC) to help shepherd the project. According to a press statement, the 45-member CAC is made up of “community and citywide stakeholders recommended by local elected officials” tasked with ensuring that local residents fill the 25,000 jobs Amazon says it will bring to town.

“The Community Advisory Committee will bring together stakeholders of all backgrounds to help shape this important plan,” de Blasio said. “Robust community engagement is critical to ensuring that the investments and resources generated from this project serve the needs of everyone in Long Island City and beyond.”

Opponents have criticized the lack of transparency in the deal to give Amazon roughly $3 billion in state and city subsidies while sidestepping the city’s Uniform Land Use Review Process (ULURP).

Cuomo, however, said “community input will be a critical part of the development process.”

“We look forward to working with local elected officials, community organizations and residents to ensure their voices are heard as we work to create tens of thousands of well-paying jobs, generate billions in revenue that will be reinvested in the region, strengthen our infrastructure, and expand opportunity for New Yorkers,” Cuomo said.

State Assemblymember Catherine Nolan, who represents Long Island City, hailed the CAC and the inclusion of a diverse set of activists on the committee.

“I am grateful to the activists who have agreed to serve on a diverse community advisory committee to provide important direction and feedback to guide this plan,” Nolan said. “It will be important to make sure that affordable housing, transportation improvements and anti-displacement efforts become reality over the course of this effort.”

Nolan was the only elected official representing LIC to announce her support for the CAC plan.

Jimmy Van Bramer have been fierce opponents of the Amazon deal since it was announced last month. Though both lawmakers initially signed an overture letter to Amazon, they have since balked at the subsidies and the lack of transparency in the development.

Barnes & Noble Announces the Best Books of 2018

The Associated Press

Barnes & Noble the world's largest retail bookseller, announced the Best Books of 2018 as chosen by the company's expert booksellers yesterday. The curated lists highlight books of interest to a wide range of readers, and include the year's top books overall, as well as by category, including the best thriller and suspense books, history and current affairs, young adult, young readers and kids.

"[This year] was a big year for books across all categories, including much-anticipated memoirs, political books that made headlines, and new thrillers by some of the world's bestselling writers," said Liz Harwell, senior director of merchandising, trade books at Barnes & Noble. "We hope the lists remind readers of some of the most popular books of the year, as well as introduce them to new and surprising titles."

"In the Kids and YA categories, 2018 was truly a blockbuster year, with the release of new editions to fan-favorite series, popular authors with new releases and debut authors making a name for themselves," said Stephanie Fryling, vice president of merchandising, children's books at Barnes & Noble. "Readers of all ages will find a lot to love in this year's lists."

The Best Books of 2018 as curated by Barnes & Noble are:

- "An American Marriage" by Tayari Jones
- "Barracoon: The Story of the Last 'Black Cargo'" by Zora Neale Hurston
- "Becoming" by Michelle Obama
- "Calypso" by David Sedaris
- "Circe" by Madeline Miller
- "Educated" by Tara Westover
- "Fire & Blood" by George R. R. Martin
- "Girl, Wash Your Face: Stop Believing the Lies About Who You Are So You Can Become Who You Were Meant to Be" by Rachel Hollis
- "Leadership: In Turbulent Times" by Doris Kearns Goodwin
- "The Great Alone" by Kristin Hannah
- "The President Is Missing" by Bill Clinton and James Patterson
- "The Reckoning" by John Grisham
- "The Woman in the Window" by A.J. Finn
- "There There" by Tommy Orange
- "Unsheltered" by Barbara Kingsolver

Obama Extends Tour as Sales For 'Becoming' Top 3 Million

The Associated Press

Sales for Michelle Obama's memoir have topped 3 million and the former first lady is extending her book tour into 2019.

"Becoming," published four weeks ago, is among the fastest-selling nonfiction books in history and already among the best-selling political memoirs of all time.

Live Nation and Crown Publishing announced Tuesday that Obama will have 21 events next year, six of them in Europe. She has been appearing at such arenas as Barclays Center and Chicago's United Center, with guest interviewers including Oprah Winfrey and Reese Witherspoon.

Her tour is now scheduled to end May 12 at the Ryman Auditorium in Nashville, Tennessee.

'Pandemic' Rings Warning Bell About Gene-editing Technology

By Waka Tsunoda
The Associated Press

When there's a scientific breakthrough, Brooklyn-born Robin Cook doesn't just stand up and cheer. He uses his fertile imagination and writes a novel about its possible perils.

In his latest medical thriller, "Pandemic," Cook dramatizes the scary side of a miracle molecule called "CRISPR/Cas9," which can easily be custom-tailored to seek out and alter genes in humans and animals.

The story begins when a seemingly healthy young woman with a transplanted heart boards the subway in New York City but suffers abrupt respiratory distress and dies before she reaches her destination.

Jack Stapleton, a medical examiner who appears in 10 of Cook's previous novels, does an autopsy. He suspects that an unknown, flu-like virus is responsible for her death. He is duty-bound to identify and stop the virus before it can cause a pandemic and kill millions.

Stapleton welcomes the challenge as a "diversion" from his many personal problems. To name a few, his daughter has just been diagnosed with autism and his mother-in-law is blaming his genealogy for it. His wife, Laurie Montgomery, has unexpectedly been named the chief medical examiner, making her his boss both at home and at work.

Stapleton's investigation reveals that a hospital in New York performed the woman's heart transplant at the request of the Dover Valley Hospital in New Jersey. Dover also paid all her medical bills.

Realizing that "something weird is afoot," Stapleton drives out to Dover and receives a warm welcome from its owner, Wei Zhao, a Chinese billionaire businessman who holds a double Ph.D. in molecular biology and genetics.

Wei, a body-building enthusiast who admires Arnold Schwarzenegger, makes an intriguing villain. The novel also offers an intriguing look at the subterranean world of medical examiners, but "Pandemic" goes far beyond just entertainment.

By graphically showing what could happen were CRISPR/Cas9 to fall into the wrong hands, the author rings a much needed warning bell about gene editing technology.

Eric Ulrich Announces Bid for Public Advocate

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

In a brief video message Monday, Councilmember Eric Ulrich announced his candidacy for New York City Public Advocate, a position vacated by State Attorney General-elect Letitia James.

Ulrich, the lone Republican in Queens' City Council delegation, positioned himself as a counterweight to Mayor Bill de Blasio, who he sharply criticized in his video.

"Now more than ever New Yorkers are looking for someone to stand up to Mayor de Blasio and his so-called progressive agenda," Ulrich said. "I'm running for Public Advocate because I believe we as a city deserve better and I want to give a voice to the majority of New Yorkers that this mayor continues to ignore."

A special election to fill the vacant Public Advocate seat will take place in early 2019, though an official date has not been set. At least 13 people, including Ulrich, have announced their candidacy. All of the other candidates are Democrats.

Not everyone is a fan of the position, however. Councilmembers Ruben Diaz Sr., Mark Gjonaj, Robert Holden, Ritchie Torres and Kalman Yeger have signed onto a bill to eliminate the Public Advocate role.

Ulrich, 33, was born in Ozone Park. He represents the 32nd District, which contains several neighborhoods in Southern Queens, including Ozone Park, Howard Beach and Breezy Point.

He was first elected to the City Council in a special election in February 2009. He held onto the seat during the November 2009 election and was re-elected in 2013 and 2017.

Ulrich, one of three Republicans in the entire City Council, has been an outspoken opponent of de Blasio throughout the mayor's tenure.

"Instead of looking out for us and our interests, the mayor caters to his donors and political cronies," he said in a statement. "I'm not beholden to the party bosses and I'm not afraid to take on the mayor."

Willets Point and Fort Totten May Be NYC Ferry's Next Ports of Call

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

New York City has moved full steam ahead with a large-scale ferry expansion plan and Northeast Queens may be the system's port of call.

On Monday, Councilmember Paul Vallone announced that he had received word from the Economic Development Corporation (EDC) that the EDC has included the Citi Field Marina in Willets Point and Fort Totten in Bayside in its Ferry Feasibility Study, which began earlier this fall.

"While the city has announced and established ferry service in other areas of the city, transportation deserts like Northeast Queens have been overlooked," Vallone said. "I have advocated for a Willets Point Ferry and also supported studying Northeast Queens' shoreline for other feasible locations due to the demand from local communities, economic opportunities and the lack of transportation alternatives."

In 2014, Vallone, Councilmember Peter Koo and then-Councilmember Julissa Ferreras signed a letter to the EDC asking for the city to extend ferry service to Northeast Queens.

In August, Vallone, Koo and Councilmember Francisco Moya again called on the EDC to expand ferry service to Willets Point and Bayside.

"We will certainly consider all the feedback received along the Queens waterfront, including the locations outlined in your letter: Citi Field Marina and Fort Totten," said EDC President James Patchett in a letter to Northeast Queens councilmembers. "We will do our due diligence through this study to determine sites that are most feasible based on ridership demand, ferry navigability, and route planning."

In July, Moya said expanded ferry service would provide more access to northeast Queens.

"Just because you don't live next to a train station, or can't afford to, doesn't mean you should be cut off from public transportation," Moya said. "Extending the NYC Ferry service to Citi Field Park will give Queens residents more travel options, expand their radius for employment, medical care, education and leisure."

The city's Willets Point Redevelopment plan, first initiated in 2009 is billed by the New York City Economic Development Corporation as "a major engine for economic growth for New York City." According to the project summary, the plan will "generate local employment and business opportunities and improve the overall quality of life for local residents."

The redevelopment plan does not include reference to ferry service but was developed before the city began emphasizing — and funding — water travel as a vital feature of the transportation network.

Greater Flushing Chamber of Commerce Executive Director John Choe told the Eagle in July that his organization proposes a ferry stop in Flushing Creek, which divides Willets Point from densely populated Downtown Flushing.

Choe said the World's Fair Marina, which is located along the Flushing Promenade and is separated from the rest of Willets Point by the Whitestone Expressway, could be another "fine site," though he said it might not meet the EDC's requirement that ferry docks be located in densely populated transit hubs.

"The existing transit system is over-capacity and ferry service would really be a boon to the population and for the small businesses in Downtown Flushing," Choe told the Eagle.

The new 350-passenger Ocean Queen Rockstar will accommodate increased ferry ridership.

She Traveled a Long Road to Become a Rabbi

By Marylynne Pitz
Special to the Eagle

While Cheryl Klein was studying Hebrew for her coming-of-age bat mitzvah in 1967, she began teaching her classmates.

"I was teaching them how to sing their haftarah (biblical passages). They needed some tutoring," Rabbi Klein recalled, adding that her tutoring rate was $1 an hour.

Back then, baby sitters earned 50 cents an hour, so the 12-year-old thought she had hit the lottery.

Rabbi Klein grew up in Pittsburgh's Squirrel Hill neighborhood, where she and her friends gathered often in one another's homes, at the Jewish Community Center and the beloved Baskin-Robbins ice cream shop on Forbes Avenue.

"It was the Camelot of our lives," she recalled.

A mother of four, her voice is reassuringly soft while the intelligence and fierce resolve in her blue eyes is unmistakable. She has devoted her life to Jewish education.

For more than 20 years, she taught Jewish history and Holocaust studies at the School of Advanced Jewish Studies, where she more than doubled the enrollment from 120 to 268. From 1997 to 2002, she was the school principal. (Today, it's the Jewish Site for Innovative Teen Education.)

"I always felt very Jewish. I took such great pride in our heritage and our learning," Rabbi Klein said.

As the longtime lay cantor for Congregation Dor Hadash, Rabbi Klein has been described as "the glue that has kept Dor Hadash together in service after service, according to the Squirrel Hill group's 40th anniversary booklet, published in May 2003. Dor Hadash, Western Pennsylvania's only Reconstructionist congregation, has never employed a paid rabbi, preferring leadership by its members. Rabbi Klein was ordained in 2016 but does not serve as the paid rabbi for Dor Hadash.

It's not unusual for Rabbi Klein to shed tears as she mourns the loss of 11 people from three congregations who were shot and killed at the Tree of Life/L'Simcha synagogue on Oct. 27. She attended all 11 funerals and shivas. In addition to Tree of Life/L'Simcha, Dor Hadash and New Light Congregation were using the Tree of Life facilities.

Rabbi Klein grew up in Congregation Dor Hadash and, along with its 150 members, had a deep connection to Jerry Rabinowitz, a beloved physician and Dor Hadash member who died in the attack.

"I took this very personally. This beast infringed on our city and targeted the Jewish people and targeted my synagogue. I, along with everybody else, am in a slow process of healing," she said.

Dan Leger, another longtime Dor Hadash member, is slowly recovering from serious wounds he suffered that day.

Rabbi Klein's son Jonah, who is doing his general surgery residency in Philadelphia, has raised nearly $13,000 on a GoFundMe page for a scholarship to honor Dr. Rabinowitz, who graduated from the University of Pennsylvania's medical school. That school will award the scholarship to a third-year medical student who demonstrates Dr. Rabinowitz's devotion to patients and plans to go into family practice, Rabbi Klein said.

The outpouring of support from family, friends and complete strangers has helped.

"Some days are better than others. I've seen the goodness of so many people," she said. Rabbi Klein had no idea there was a fraternity of Jewish police officers. Some of them drove in from New York City and Chicago to support Pittsburgh's police officers, who risked their lives to save people on that horrific Saturday morning. Rabbi Klein met a Jewish physician who lost a daughter in the February 2018 shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla. The physician flew in to Pittsburgh to offer his support.

A memorial grows outside the Tree of Life Synagogue in the Squirrel Hill neighborhood in Pittsburgh.

Since the Tree of Life massacre, Dor Hadash worship services have drawn as many as 200 people. Founded in 1963, Congregation Dor Hadash was Pittsburgh's first egalitarian synagogue where women could hold leadership roles.

It's often called a "do it yourself" synagogue because a six-member board of volunteers leads the congregation instead of a paid rabbi and that keeps membership dues low.

Rabbi Klein never trained with a cantor. During her first year with Dor Hadash, the congregation ordered cassette tapes and she spent an entire summer learning the melodies she had to sing during the High Holy Days services for Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur.

As an ordained rabbi, she continues to lend her wealth of knowledge to Dor Hadash. In March, she will do her first destination wedding for a couple in Hilton Head, S.C.

About every five years, members debate whether to hire a rabbi, but so far they have not. Dor Hadash does not own a building and held services at two schools in Squirrel Hill before moving to the Tree of Life building on Wilkins Avenue. Two weeks ago, the congregation moved to Josiah Cohen chapel at Rodef Shalom Temple in Shadyside.

By the time Rabbi Klein was hired to be the cantor for Dor Hadash in 1986, she had a 2-year-old daughter, Adina, and a 1-year-old son, Ari. The following year, she delivered twin sons, Dustin and Jonah.

For 33 years, she has chanted the prayers at Friday night and Saturday morning services. Even her childhood prepared her to be a cantor. She spent Saturday mornings with the youngest members of Dor Hadash, which means "new generation."

As a young member herself, she also was musical. By age 6, she was taking voice lessons at the Pittsburgh Playhouse on Saturday afternoons.

"I knew Mr. McFeely," she said, referencing David Newell, who played that role on the "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" television show. "I knew David when he was working at the children's theater."

After completing her sophomore year at Taylor Allderice High School, she enrolled at Hillel Academy. In addition, during the evenings and on Sundays, she studied Jewish history, literature and Hebrew at the College of Jewish Studies, an intensive program of study led by Aharon Kessler, who recruited Hebrew teachers from Israel.

"It was the premier model of a supplemental Jewish high school," she recalled. "Education, for me, has always been the power to rise above and be successful."

Rabbi Klein earned bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Pittsburgh during the 1970s. For decades, she has officiated at funerals, weddings and baby-naming ceremonies for Dor Hadash members. But she wanted to learn and do everything possible to preserve Jewish culture, customs, liturgy and heritage.

Starting in 2014, she began two years of intensive distance learning. For 40 hours each week, she locked herself in a room and studied at the Cooper-Siegel Library in O'Hara.

"I probably was destined to go on this path," Rabbi Klein said. "Women in the 1970s were not being given that extra shove into the rabbinate. I felt driven."

In 2016, during an emotional ceremony at the Holocaust Resource Center in Queens, she was ordained a nondenominational rabbi. She was the only woman in a class of four graduates. The Mesifita Adat Wolkowisk Rabbinical Academy in Flushing operates the program where she received her training.

Applicants typically have a minimum of 25 years as Jewish professionals; many trainees are either cantors or educators.

The first blessing she offered as an ordained rabbi was at the June 2016 wedding of her son Jonah and his bride, Robin.

"I call Dor Hadash my second love affair because it has truly been a blessing to serve the congregation," she said.

For Jews, Rabbi Klein added, "Staying strong is an important part of who we are. When our backs are against the wall you can try and push the wall down or run around the wall. Or you can put each other on top of your shoulders so that you can look over the other side of the wall and see hope. We always look for the hope."

2019 Michelin Guide Recognizes Astoria Pizzeria

By David Brand
Queens Daily Eagle

The stars didn't quite align for Astoria pizzeria VIA VAI, but it got pretty darn close.

On Monday, premier restaurant guide Michelin — which dispenses its iconic stars to top bistros around the world — announced VIA VAI as a "recommended dining destination" in its 2019 guide.

"From their wine list to the menu, it's all about Italy here," Michelin writes. "The kitchen spends every morning making fresh pastas and with the likes of gnocchi orecchiette and pappardelle among the choices, you can't go wrong."

Owner and head chef Antonio Morichini was born in Rome and attended culinary school in Piedmont, in Northern Italy.

He eventually moved to Liguria, where he learned about seafood preparation.

He moved back to Rome and worked in three Michelin-starred restaurants, Il Convivio, Glass Hostaria and Acquolina.

"It is a real honor and great personal satisfaction for VIA VAI to be recognized by Michelin for the great quality of our food and our notable and exclusively Italian wine list," Morichini said in a statement. "We take pride in everything we do, and work hard to give our diners a great experience."

Queens County Needs a Conviction Integrity Unit

By Gregory Lasak
Special to the Eagle

For most of us, the holiday season means spending time with family and friends. Yet, I cannot help but wonder how many innocent people are facing the holidays in prison away from their loved ones.

They have already missed Thanksgiving, countless birthdays, and milestones in their children's lives. All because we have a criminal justice system that failed them. A District Attorney's office in their home county — an office that is supposed to protect them — that failed them. Now, they sit with little hope that their wrong will be righted.

In the late 1990s, when I was in charge of the Major Crimes Division of the Queens District Attorney's Office, which meant that I oversaw the prosecutions of all homicides, sex crimes, career criminals, and domestic violence felonies, Seymour James, then the head of the Queens County Legal Aid Society, approached me with a case.

James informed me that he had a client he swore was innocent, but he couldn't prove it. The client, Lee Long, had already served six years in jail on a rape conviction and all his appeals had been denied. Seymour asked me to give the case another look.

I knew reinvestigating this case would not win me any popularity contests. By doing this, I was going up against the cop who arrested Lee, the grand jury that indicted him, the judge who upheld the indictment, the assistant district attorney who prosecuted him, the jury who convicted him and an appellate court that had upheld Lee's conviction. None of that mattered to me because I knew giving this case a fresh look was the right thing to do.

Unraveling the truth was not easy. Working closely with one of my investigators, I spent countless hours interviewing additional witnesses and examining more evidence. Ultimately, we discovered that Lee was on the J train when the rape occurred. After a post-conviction hearing, Lee Long was finally a free man.

Sadly, Lee wasn't alone in his plight, and I continued to investigate questionable convictions both on my own initiative and at the request of defense attorneys and other legal professionals.

Another case I reinvestigated was that of Lamar Palmer, a nineteen year-old young man who was convicted of assault-robbery for slashing a woman in Queens Village and sentenced to nine years upstate. An innocent man, Lamar had been sitting in jail for months when I received a letter from his brother Dwayne.

Dwayne wrote, "I was told that a defense attorney's job was to defend his or her client to the best of his or her ability, but that a district attorney's job was to seek justice for the accuser as well as the accused."

Dwayne was correct, and that's why I reopened Lamar's case. After a thorough reinvestigation, we exonerated him too.

In all, I helped exonerate nearly two dozen Lee Longs and Lamar Palmers during my time in the office. Some of these men had even confessed or pleaded guilty, but with diligent work, we were able to free them. Unfortunately, that work ended when I left the office and no one else attempted to continue those efforts.

Even as other district attorneys' offices in the city have taken up this work and stories of the wrongfully convicted garner national attention, Queens has bucked the norm.

The current district attorney has resisted opening a Conviction Integrity Unit claiming that such a unit is unnecessary. Instead, the district attorney asserts that it is a shared responsibility of everyone in the office to prevent wrongful convictions in the first place.

That is a nice platitude, but it does not reflect reality.

In reality, assistant district attorneys already have a great deal on their plates. And though we'll try to lessen that load when we begin declining to prosecute low-level offenses like small amounts of marijuana and fare evasion, there is still much work to do.

Each assistant cannot focus on wrongful conviction work on top of his or her normal caseload. It is intensive work that takes time and effort. We need dedicated, experienced prosecutors that are up to the task.

More importantly, people get things wrong. Prosecutors make mistakes. Police officers make mistakes. Witnesses make mistakes.

Sometimes, young assistants become so focused on obtaining convictions that they never stop to probe the evidence. They go with their gut when that simply isn't enough.

Prosecutors are human; it happens. A prosecutor's lapse in judgment, however, should not ruin someone else's life. Moreover, a person should not have to sit in jail because a prosecutor's office refuses to admit it was wrong. I firmly believe that any prosecution anywhere should be able to withstand the harshest of scrutiny.

Queens needs a Conviction Integrity Unit so we can correct mistakes and continue to seek justice for all our citizens.

When I'm district attorney, anyone who believes he or she has been wrongfully convicted will have the opportunity to have his or her case looked at anew by a unit committed to that work.

The unit will be staffed with seasoned prosecutors and investigators with the experience to complete the task. It will review cases without fear or favor because everyone in Queens deserves equal justice under the law.

As a young assistant district attorney, I was taught that in trying to decide whether or not to prosecute a case, you should always try to prove the suspect innocent first. If you cannot do that, you have reason to believe he or she is guilty.

I fear that the current office has moved away from that approach. For that reason, I will also revamp the training program in the office to ensure that assistants are taking this approach seriously because someone's life hangs in the balance in each case, and that responsibility should not be taken lightly.

In short, the central tenet of our justice system is innocent until proven guilty. We must never move away from that. Further, when we get it wrong, we have to be willing to admit that we did and make it right.

That's what we'll start doing in Queens again — for all the Lee Longs and Lamar Palmers out there.

Brooklyn Prosecutors Drop Charges Against Mom After Cops Tore Baby From Her Arms

By Christina Carrega
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Charges against the Brooklyn mother whose baby boy was ripped from her arms by NYPD officers inside a government benefits office were dropped by prosecutors Tuesday afternoon.

Jazmine Headley, 23, was remanded to Rikers Island on Friday shortly after her arrest on a warrant hold from Mercer County's District Attorney's Office in New Jersey.

After a witness captured the chaotic incident on a cellphone video and posted it on Facebook, the video went viral on social media and was widely disseminated by news outlets.

In the five days since Headley's arrest, officials from across the city called for her release.

Yesterday, Brooklyn District Attorney Eric Gonzalez released a statement announcing that he would drop the charges against Headley.

"Continuing to pursue that case will not serve any purpose and I therefore move to dismiss it immediately in the interest of justice," Gonzalez said in the statement. "Discretion is the better part of valor and we must be thoughtful and compassionate in evaluating the merit of our case."

However, even as DA Gonzalez dismissed the resisting arrest and obstructing governmental administration charges, Headley still faces indictment in New Jersey.

In March 2017, Headley was indicted for two counts of third-degree credit card theft and fourth-degree trafficking in personal identifying information.

She and two others were also arrested in July 2016 and charged with using counterfeit credit cards in Lawrence Township, N.J.

Headley did not show up for her July 2017 arraignment following the indictment, according to Casey DeBlasio, a spokeswoman for the Mercer County District Attorney.

Headley's attorney Lisa Schreibersdorf, the founder of Brooklyn Defender Services (BDS), filed an emergency motion in Brooklyn Supreme Court yesterday requesting Justice Craig Walker release her client on her own recognizance.

Prosecutors agreed that Headley should be released from jail with a bail package, but Walker decided to release her on her own recognizance yesterday evening.

Headley's 1-year-old son is in the custody of her grandmother and is recovering from what Schreibersdorf called "lingering bruising."

A GoFundMe campaign that the attorney service launched on Tuesday morning launched on behalf of Headley's family yesterday had raised more than $16,000 of a $20,000 goal to help pay for childcare as of press time Tuesday afternoon.

Although this experience has overwhelmed Headley, she wants to turn this incident into an impactful moment.

"She wants to make an impact beyond her and about the treatment of clients in HRA offices," Schreibersdorf said.
